FARM Program gives farmers a helping hand

by Teresa Penegy Paprock

Gene Zimmerman puts on his gloves, throws on a thick coat and scarf to brace against the winter wind, and goes outside to greet the goats.

In the front yard of his home near Fox Lake is a goat amusement park of sorts, with ramps and things to crawl through. Goats get bored, he says, and happy goats are productive goats. Behind the house is another enclosure where more goats live, and behind that, a barn for the goats who are "expecting."

The tiniest goats, some only a day old, live in the warmest barn, snuggled up to their mothers and to sneaky little kittens. Gene likes to get close to the goats, pretending to kiss their curious-looking faces. It's clear that the relationship he has with them is one of mutual respect - he keeps them warm, fed and happy, and they supply him with the milk for goat cheese, a delicacy that Europeans have always enjoyed and Americans seem to have discov-

Created only recently.

It's a good living that Gene has carved out, with his wife, Gwen, two daughters, Kiersten and Raisha, and their handful of huge St. Bernards. And Gene knows not to take it for granted. Farming is hard work - statistically, the most dangerous occupation in the

$2.4 million Capital Campaign launched for women's hall

by Elisabeth Marx

Championed with a lead gift of $1.5 million from the Gregory C. Van Wie Charitable Foundation, Easter Seals has launched a $2.4 million capital campaign to build and furnish a new, fully accessible hall for women and girls. More than $2.2 has been raised to date.

The building will serve as a memorial to the late Gregory C. Van Wie, a Wisconsin Dells native who was a real estate developer, a member of the Kiwanis and an avid supporter and fan of Camp Wawbeek. Van Wie died in 1996 while still in his 40s. The building will be possible because of this generous gift from his trust.

Artist's rendering of the new residence hall.

Each year, almost 400 campers - children, teens and adults - experience the joy of spending a week or two at Camp Wawbeek. Unfortunately, the residence hall for women and girls is 60 years old and is seriously outmoded for the needs of our campers. Among many other problems, the current dorm accommodates wheelchairs awkwardly, offers little privacy, and has too much of an institutional feel. At the time the residence hall was built, people with severe disabilities were often association with Easter Seals Wisconsin. John's involvement with Easter Seals has spanned more than 20 years. He has been valued as an "unofficial advisor" to camp. An original member of the "Golf Outing for Kids!" Committee, he actively participated in the event by playing and sponsoring. His family and his business have donated to the annual pancake breakfast for 10 years and he is an active contributor to the Friends of Wawbeek. John has participated in the Easter Seals institutionalized. A typical Easter Seals camper in the 1950s was likely to be ambulatory but was physically limited by polio, the early stages of multiple sclerosis, mild forms of cerebral palsy, a club foot or a single limb amputation.

Things are quite different now. More people are surviving physically traumatic births and accidents but require extensive personal care. Individuals with mild physical disabilities and medical needs are comfortable mainstreamed into regular camp settings. Now, 80% of our campers use wheelchairs and require assistance with personal care, such as bathing.

A typical camper today has much more complex physical disabilities, frequently stemming from significant damage to the nervous system, muscles, brain or spinal cord, such as occurs with complex cases of cerebral palsy and muscular dystrophy.

RIVA Architects worked closely with us to create a building that balances our desire to create a camp experience that brings people together and close to nature, with a commitment to meeting the physical care needs of campers.

The new two-story hall is designed to hold 56 campers in eight rooms. It will have two elevators, a kitchen and dining hall, several lounges, a camper store, and a computer

VIP program for a number of years. John assisted with the building of the Respite Center by asking his suppliers to donate building supplies and hardware. And because of his tremendous efforts and vision in helping to secure a contribution of $1.5 million from his cousin's trust, Camp Wawbeek is building a new residence hall for women and girls.

The Kenneth Svec Award was presented to Erva Loomis Merow of Kenosha for her work with people with disabilities. She has been a volunteer in her community for 54 years, serving adults and children with mental and physical disabilities in a variety of ways.

The Janesville Blackhawk Golden K, Manitowoc Golden K, and Heart of the Valley Golden K of Little Chute received the Outstanding Service Organization Award; Madison Newspapers Inc., Dells Events, and In Business received the Outstanding Media Award; Wilmot Key Club received the Outstanding Youth Fund Raiser Award; Jim Sala received the Outstanding Volunteer Fund Raiser award; and Fred Leverenz and Teri Black received the Elsa Trombla Outstanding Volunteer Award.

room. Campers will have twice as many bathrooms, and these will have more specialized modifications and greater privacy.

The entire building will be air-conditioned, a virtual necessity for our campers whose conditions make it more difficult to regulate their body temperature.

The campaign goal of $2.4 million will primarily cover the costs of building and furnishing the new Hall for Women and Girls, and will also transform the current girls' dorm into a nursing station and canteen and add improvements to the men and boys residence hall.

The new residence hall is scheduled to be completed by summer 2003, and work on the other buildings will take place in the fall. To accomplish that goal, we hope to have gifts and pledges in place by June 2003.

Easter Seals Wisconsin will recognize donors in a variety of ways, including naming opportunities for various parts of the new building and a Wall of Recognition in the front entry. Outright gifts of cash have the most immediate impact in securing the financial health of the new residence hall, but we are delighted to accept gifts in other forms that may better fit the donor's philanthropic preferences.

For information on making a donation to the capital campaign, contact Ken Saville, (608-277-8288 or 800-422-2324, ext. 108, ksaville@wi-easterseals.org).

Friends recognized at Easter Seals Annual Meeting

In 1989, when Debra Pahl of Oshkosh was a college student, she began to notice a loss of movement in her fingers and toes. Soon after, the weakness spread to her legs. Later, she would be diagnosed with Muscular Dystrophy, and with Reflex Sympathetic Dystrophy Syndrome.

A trained Emergency Medical Technician, she was eventually unable to do that job. Instead of giving up, she chose to pursue a career as a medical coding specialist. Those who know her say that Deb portrays an attitude of encouragement to all around her. On November 2, 2002, Easter Seals Wisconsin presented the Personal Achievement Award to Deb, for all the barriers she has overcome and all the hope she has brought to others.

So far, Deb has had 17 surgeries and must use an electric wheelchair to get around. But she refuses to let that prevent her from reaching out. She volunteers at Mercy Medical Center in Oshkosh, serves on the Oshkosh Transit Advisory Committee, and is a member of the Winnebago County Long Term Support Board for the Aging.

Deb was one of a number of people recognized that day for their contributions to others.

Former board member and board chair Wayne Corey of Madison received the Lifetime Achievement Award in recognition of his many years of service as a spokesman on behalf of Easter Seals and people with disabilities.

Wayne has been a dedicated Easter Seals Wisconsin volunteer and friend since 1975. He has served on the board of directors, hosted telethons, spoken to legislators, served as a charter member of the Easter Seals Wisconsin Presidents' Council and as chair of the State of Wisconsin's Americans with Disabilities Act State-wide Coordinating Committee.

Auctions raise funds for Easter Seals programs

TV viewers tuned in to Easter Seals auctions twice over the last several months and supported Easter Seals programs by bidding on a wide variety of fantastic items. The Mad-Town Auction, held October 27, raised more than $24,000. Thanks to sponsors Fox 47, WOLX 94.9 FM, Pizza Hut, ANEW, Erickson Publications, and Insty-Prints.

The Fox Valley auction, held April 6, raised $12,000. Easter Seals thanks our sponsors, UPN Channel 32 WACY, WROE 94.3 FM, News Radio 1360, WGEE, Godfrey & Kahn S.C., Sam's Club, Appleton, Fraternal Order of Police, and Circle K.

Easter Seals Welcomes...

Tricia Behn joined the Easter Seals Wisconsin staff as a rural rehabilitation specialist in November 2002. She is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin-Madison with a Bachelor of Science degree in occupational therapy. She is currently enrolled in a master's program in health care administration.

Tricia grew up on a farm in Sauk County and helped her family with the dairy operation, as well as with other livestock. She has been an instructor at Madison Area Technical College and worked for 24 years as an occupational therapist for the Sauk County Health Care Center. She was also employed as an area director for Dungarvin, providing service in multiple counties.

Of her position at Easter Seals, Tricia says, "In my position, the farm assessments are the highlight. I enjoy meeting new people and helping in any way I can to reduce the challenges that may be keeping them from their productive farm roles. I have found the individuals that I have met to be patient, creative problem solvers. Many have farmed the same land for generations and continue to work alongside grandparents and parents. I enjoy hearing about the farms and farm life."

Bruce Whitmore joined the Easter Seals staff as a rural rehabilitation specialist in November 2002. He has a Bachelor of Science degree in technical agriculture from the University of Wisconsin-Platteville and a master's degree in education with a vocational emphasis. He has been an owner and operator of a family dairy, crop and beef farm; taught vocational agriculture at Brodhead High School; and served as the farm and grounds manager at St. Coletta of Wisconsin. "The part I like most about my job so far is that I get to meet farmers and try to help them make their lives better," he says.

Brooke Welch joined the Easter Seals Wisconsin staff as a technical assistant for the FARM program in November 2002. Brooke grew up on a farm and says she enjoys her position because she likes working with farmers.

Elisabeth Marx joined Easter Seals in September 2002 as Manager of Foundation and Government Relations. She has a master's degree in policy analysis and nonprofit management from the New School for Social Research. In the past, Elisabeth has served as Executive Director of Mothers & Others for a Liveable Planet and for the Rauch Foundation, a private family foundation concerning children and families, community development and the environment. Of her position at Easter Seals, she says, "I enjoy helping children and adults with physical and developmental disabilities."

"At camp, you are like most of the kids - not the only one in the school. I like that. It's good to learn how others talk and get around."

-Kerri, Wawbeek Camper

Linda Outhouse joined the staff of Easter Seals in October 2002 as an accounting assistant. She has a two year technical degree in medical technology. Linda has experience with computer accounting software and has worked for Big Brothers Big Sisters of Dane County as financial coordinator. "I enjoy working for ESW because of the friendly atmosphere and the fact that the agency is working to make the lives of people better."

Teri Jean Blaney joined Easter Seals in August 2002 as a telemarketer for the Donation Center. She became an office assistant in October and assistant manager in January 2003. She has a bachelor of science degree in education with a specialization in Behavioral Disabilities. Her past employment includes teaching at several day care centers, owner of TJ Enterprises, and a claims representative at WPS. Teri says she likes the fact that Easter Seals is a nonprofit agency and that it helps people with disabilities in Wisconsin. "I also like dealing with people that want to donate to our cause every day."

United States. Every year approximately 5-8% of farmers are disabled by farm injuries. For Gene, who suffers from several medical conditions, farming very nearly became impossible.

It's hard for him to imagine doing anything else; he and his wife were both raised on farms. Unlike with other jobs, one can't just walk away from a farm and apply elsewhere. So when Gene's medical conditions made it harder and harder for him to tend to the animals, he knew he needed some help. He found that help through Easter Seals Farm Assessment and Rehabilitation Methods program (FARM), formerly known as the Resource Center for Farmers with Disabilities (RCFD).

FARM, in partnership with the Division of Vocational Rehabilitation (DVR) and the University of Wisconsin Cooperative Extension (to form AgrAbility), helps farmers with disabilities to continue to farm. Under an agreement with DVR, FARM will provide up to 72 farm site assessments this year (so far 30 have been requested), and the program is expected to expand even more in the years to come. DVR counselors will be provided a better understanding of the issues facing farmers as well as the cultural aspects of farm family life.

With the change from RCFD to FARM, the program has grown to three times bigger than it was previously, so more clients can be served more quickly and with more resources. Three full-time positions have been added at Easter Seals Wisconsin – a technical assistant and two rural rehabilitation specialists. A computer data base will help match clients to community resources best able to help them. The director of the Easter Seals FARM program, Paul Leverenz, is training DVR staff to deal with the special challenges of farming. "The DVR staff has had great success with farmers," says Leverenz. "With the training we can add the benefit of Easter Seals' experience."

Wisconsin has a definite need for such a service, with $40 billion annually coming from agriculture. "Agriculture has a huge economic impact on Wisconsin," says Leverenz.

Interestingly, not all FARM clients start out as farmers. "Some people have actually entered the field of agriculture because of a disability," says Leverenz. "They find out this is something they can do."

The agreement calls for outreach to the agricultural community to provide a better understanding of the services DVR offers. The FARM program works in collaboration with two partners: the UW Cooperative Extension, which provides consumer outreach and evaluation services for FARM, and the Wisconsin Farm Center, which performs farm financial feasibility studies for clients, along with consumer outreach.

For Gene, the main problem was his knees, which had degenerated. "I've always had knee problems," he says, tracing them to an extreme growth spurt in childhood. In addition, Gene has an undiagnosed disease of the central nervous system which causes headaches and fevers. He never knows when the "attacks" will hit, and when they do, it becomes exceedingly difficult for him to tend to his 500 animals.

After evaluating the situation, Easter Seals staff recommended equipment to help, and DVR provided that equipment, including a gravity-flow feed bin, a Polydome bin, a Poly-Tuf cart, and a rock picker. Each of these items made it easier for Gene to continue his work with less stress to his knees, and with less overall effort so that his illness would not make it impossible for him to work. The equipment has allowed Gene and his family to continue to live the life they have loved.

Russ Moyer is a dairy farmer outside Barneveld. Like Gene, Russ has had his share of knee problems, and both of his knees have been replaced. Russ has a large dairy farm, with some 400 cows that must be milked twice a day. Hired help has had a tendency to be unreliable, and Russ' family helps when possible, but for the most part, Russ goes it alone. Russ needed assistive devices to help him continue to tend to his cows.

One simple fix was stairs added to his tractor. "It's easier to get up on it," he says. "It really helps an awful lot." He also received, through DVR, a hand-operated machine for hauling whatever needs hauling, be it salt, feed, rocks or leaves. By using his hands he is able to prevent stress to his knees. "It's easier now than it has been in the last few years," he says.

Russ has been farming for 35 years. Like Gene, Russ sees farming as his life; leaving it isn't really an option. "I like the cattle, and I like being outdoors," he says.

Wisconsin-Upper Peninsula Michigan Circle K Governor Cindy Ramm and Treasurer Paul Morgan pose with Ken Saville, Vice President of Program Development for Easter Seals Wisconsin. Circle K is a great supporter of Easter Seals camps. The college student organization had a clean-up day at camp in the fall, and raised $3,200 at an auction in October 2002.

Brenda Thompson, Easter Seals' Director of Development for Northwestern Wisconsin, is shown with Dale Nelson, manager of Burger King® for North Central and Northern Wisconsin. Burger King® raised $3800 for Easter Seals selling coupons for frozen Coke.

As a single mother, it has given me a break from always having to take care of my son. My other children were able to do things we enjoy without having to leave. I also was able to get some much needed rest for myself. This a wonderful program.

Second annual "Wines Around the World" a success for Easter Seals

Easter Seals Wisconsin's second annual "Wines Around the World" event attracted more than 250 guests. Held February 25 at the Holiday Inn Hotel and Suites on Madison's west side, the event featured wines and hors d'oeuvres from Germany, Italy, the United States and Chile. Entertainment was provided by the Ed Anders Quartet.

Sponsors included Bretl's Wine and Spirits, Cafe Rigoletto, Holiday Inn Hotel & Suites, Madison Newspapers Inc., Madison's Wine & Cigar Room, Nedrebo's Formal Wear, The Wine Boutique, WCJZ Smooth Jazz Radio, Whole Foods Market, and WOLX/Triple M Radio. Easter Seals especially thanks Carlson Wagonlit Travel - Target East and Alto Vino Winery for gift donations.

Thank you to Bob and Millie Yost of Neenah for your annual donation of paper goods for camp!

Donation Center giving increases with mail system

After five years of calling to arrange pick-ups, the Easter Seals Donation Center changed to a mail system and has seen a dramatic increase in donations.

Donation Center manager Jo Warren said the Donation Center had several reasons for changing from a phone-based to a mail-based system. A big factor was the "no-call" list that Wisconsin implemented in January. Although the list is aimed at for-profit telemarketers and does not apply to nonprofit agencies, people who had joined the list were justifiably irritated when telephoned. In addition, many people now use cell phones as their primary phones, have unlisted numbers, and/or screen calls using caller ID. The Donation Center also found that it would be more economically efficient to use mail.

"With the postcards, we are reaching 50% more people than we were before," says Warren. "We can put information on the cards so people really know what Easter Seals is doing, and it gives us more visibility." Warren says donations have increased 35-50% since December, when the large yellow postcards started being mailed out.

Through an arrangement with Savers, the Thrift Department Store, Easter Seals Wisconsin earns money for its programs by selling donated clothing and household goods to Savers.

"I like the investment - being my own boss. And I like being able to produce the main thing people need: food." Russ' children and grandchildren have worked the farm. "Family is very important to me," he says.

Through DVR, Russ received a Kawasaki Mule and a Bobcat Loader, among other machinery. The equipment allows Russ to continue working despite the fact that he has suffered great knee pain.

Before the FARM program was involved, "it was very painful just to walk," he said. Yet, like most farmers, he adds, "I'd have kept farming. I'd have found a way to do it - somehow. I don't intend to retire." Ronald Schuler, professor chair of biological systems engineering at the University of Wisconsin and project director for AgrAbility, recognizes that farmers like Russ will attempt to press on despite illness or injury. "Without assistive devices, some of the farmers would discontinue farming, but many

PUSH America fraternity builds shelter for Camp Wawbeek

Volunteers from PUSH America, a nonprofit organization formed in 1977 by members of honor fraternity Pi Kappa Phi, provide service nationwide for people with disabilities. PUSH America has raised millions of dollars and donated millions of man hours to build facilities for people with disabilities across the nation.

In October, members built a campout shelter at Silent Rock at Camp Wawbeek. They stayed for the weekend and participated in evening activities.

Easter Seals Camp Wawbeek is thankful for PUSH America volunteers' hard work.

Easter Seals Wisconsin welcomes new, returning board members

Rick Lonigro joined the Easter Seals Wisconsin Board of Directors in the fall. After having been an Easter Seals VIP for 7 years, Rick said, "I saw firsthand the influence Easter Seals has on the lives of people who really need it. This was a way to expand my role with the organization." Rick is senior manager of Grant Thornton, Madison. He and his wife Amia have a 4-year-old daughter Brooke and an infant daughter, Lindsey.

Board chair Bill Holley returned to the Easter Seals board after a year away. He has been an Easter Seals volunteer for 20 years and spent 10 years on the board previously. "It feels fabulous to be back," he says. "Some exciting things are happening in this very difficult market."

Bill and his wife Lynn live in Middleton.

"WONDERFUL, AMAZING, HAPPY! (Who could ask for more?) I love this place! This was my seventh year."

and their families would likely suffer financial ramifications because they would not be as productive as before."

"The great thing about our program is it combines the strengths of all the organizations involved," says Leverenz. "It uses them in a way that they are available to farmers to help them achieve their goals of continuing to farm. It's an exciting thing that we now have the resources and the partnership with DVR to do the assessment work."

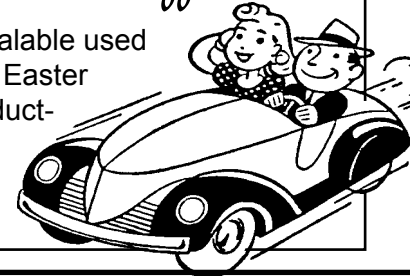

Christine Fessler, Easter Seals CEO, agrees. "There is such a tremendous need for this program in the state," she says. "Easter Seals is pleased to have the opportunity to be able to respond to that need in a collaborative manner and so quickly and comprehensively."

Thank you!

Easter Seals Wisconsin thanks C & H Distributing of Lake Delton, Wisconsin, for their continuing donation of $5,000 from the Wo-Zha-Wa Festival. Their donation makes it possible for individuals to attend camp.

I have the highest regard for the people and staff that make this program possible; without the heart and dedication of the staff none of this would be possible. It takes courage, compassion, and a giving heart to take care of special needs people; I know. Easter Seals camps are a true blessing for us as well as the special needs children and young adults.
